Over the last thirty years, we have been urged to vaccinate our dogs, cats and horses annually against a range of viral and bacterial diseases. In some American states, the law demands that you vaccinate your animals against rabies every year; in others every three years. We who love our animals have followed this advice gratefully. But what if we have made a mistake? What if the vaccines we give to protect our animals - and our children - are causing more death and disease than they are preventing?

INTRODUCTION

When Catherine O'Driscoll's young Golden Retrievers started dying and falling down with chronic illnesses, she asked why. The answers that came back centred mostly on annual vaccination and inappropriate processed food. By putting her own dogs on a natural diet and stopping vaccinating, Catherine has proven that dogs of any breed - irrespective of genetic pre-disposition - can live long and healthy lives. Hear Catherine's own story, and the collective experience of thousands of animal lovers who have taken her advice.

THE DISEASES WE VACCINATE AGAINST

A description of the diseases
Who is at risk from the diseases we vaccinate against?
Are vaccines as protective as we have been led to believe?
Are annual shots necessary?

VACCINE CONTRA-INDICATIONS

Introduction to the immune system and how vaccines affect it
Why some dogs will have vaccine reactions - the genetic link
The importance of specific nutrients in fighting the vaccine challenge
The mechanisms of vaccine damage

VACCINE-INDUCED DISEASE

There is a wealth of scientific research to illustrate very clearly that vaccines can kill. Diseases such as cancer, autoimmune diseases, epilepsy, behavioural problems, skin disease, paralysis, and more, can be shown scientifically to have been caused by vaccines. Much of this research will be presented today.

WHY YOU HAVE BEEN MISLED ABOUT VACCINES

Science is no longer about the open pursuit of truth. It is about multi-national corporations influencing governments, education, research establishments, health charities and the media. Our animals represent a multi-billion international industry. It is in your interest, and in your animals' interests, to be aware of this.

THE WAY FORWARD

By the end of this one-day seminar, Catherine hopes to have at least caused you to think about your vaccination policy. You may react with fear. What can you do, then, to prevent your beloved animals from suffering from serious viral disease? Don't worry - there are answers.

The homoeopathic vaccine alternative

Good nutrition - the foundation of health

Complementary healthcare solutions - without the side-effects

Preventative healthcare

Catherine O'Driscoll is a founder of Canine Health Concern, and the author of 'What Vets Don't Tell You About Vaccines'.

A decade ago, Catherine was an 'ordinary' dog lover. She shared her life with her husband John Watt and four beautiful Golden Retrievers. And then Oliver - only four years old - died. Why? Pretty soon her other dogs were also sick, with thyroid disease, arthritis, and leukaemia. Prudence, Oliver's litter mate, died of leukaemia at the age of six. Why?

In their quest for answers, John and Catherine formed Canine Health Concern (CHC), an international group of veterinarians and animal guardians who research the causes of good and bad health in today's dogs. From this came the first (and only) definitive piece of research into the adverse effects of vaccines in dogs. CHC also began to promote natural feeding during the early '90s, and campaigned to make animal guardians aware of natural healthcare alternatives.

'What Vets Don't Tell You About Vaccines' became a word-of-mouth bestseller and was the subject of a network TV documentary which screened in the UK and around the world.

By profession, Catherine was a freelance PR and marketing consultant, and journalist. She has now opened a healing centre in the foothills of the Scottish Highlands. She and John now share their lives with Sophie, aged 16, Guinnevere, aged seven, and Edward and Daniel, two four-year-old non-vaccinated Golden Retrievers.
